

Trade union strategy meeting, New York, 5-6 November 2018

Roger Smith Hotel, Starlight Ballroom (Mezzanine Floor)

501 Lexington Ave, New York, NY 10017

2019 promises to be a key year for the global trade union movement at the United Nations: the United Nations (UN) Commission for Social Development (CSocD) in February will address wages and inequality; the UN Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) in March will focus on access to public services and social protection, and the High-Level Political Forum (HLPF) in July and September, will review global progress on education, empowering people and ensuring inclusiveness and equality, including decent work, and the importance of strong institutions and peace. 2019 is also the Centenary of the ILO, with numerous events during the General Assembly in September 2019 that present the trade union movement with a major political opportunity to put labour issues and the need for the democratization of global economic governance at the very heart of the United Nations.

Therefore Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung (FES) New York and Public Services International (PSI) host a Global Trade Union Strategy Meeting, 5-6 November in NYC, to reflect on inputs, joint campaigning and mapping strategic opportunities for trade union action in the lead up to 2019. The main focus of the meeting will be to outline a multi-layer action plan to be launched at the CSocD and carried forward throughout 2019, including side and parallel events at each of the major UN meetings, and connecting on-going trade union campaigns with the main themes discussed at the UN.

This meeting functions as a joint training opportunity for trade union delegates participating in these UN committees. We also want to build more strategic alliances with other major groups ahead of the year so that trade union priorities are mainstreamed.
